Noreia filmscreening und talk
08:00 pm | SCHLOSS LIND

Jan Peter Hammer's film tells the story of a Styrian village that was renamed "Noreia" in 1930 after the archaeologist Walter Schmid suspected it to be the site of the Celtic capital, near which the famous battle of the Germanic armies against the Romans is said to have taken place – a thesis that was later disproven. Schmid's claim generated great enthusiasm in nationalist circles. The film shows how villagers enthusiastically supported the myth, established a "royal house," and continue to work on its preservation to this day. Following the film: Talk with Ekaterina Degot, J P Hammer, and Werner Fest, moderated by Andreas Staudinger.
