Today in the Ausseerland

Lake Altaussee

Lake Altaussee, also known as the "dark blue inkwell", impresses with its crystal-clear, deep blue water and views of the Dachstein, Loser and Trisselwand. A panoramic path around seven kilometers long invites you to take a walk - you can also easily reach the Seewiese by solar-powered boat.

Liegloch - cave

The up to 15 m wide and 10 m high Liegloch near Tauplitz opens up at 1,290 m above sea level. The impressive cave entrance can be reached after a 45-minute walk via the Hollam district.

village church Gößl

The church in Gößl was built by 14 families to avoid the journey to Bad Aussee. Self-financed and lovingly renovated, it now serves as a historical gem for masses and events.
